The 2012 Bolgheri Rosso Cipriana is 80% Cabernet Sauvignon and 20% Merlot, vinified in concrete vats and aged in oak for six months. This wine makes a good impression thanks to soft layers of sweet cherry fruit, chocolate and baking spice. The wine is not overdone or heavy, but it would make a good pairing partner to meatloaf or grilled lamb. The presentation is simple and clean.

The 2015 Bolgheri Rosso Cipriana (80% Cabernet Sauvignon and 20% Merlot) offers an extremely dark and dense fruit profile. This wine is redolent of warm vintage aromas of jammy fruit followed by overtly sweet and succulent flavors. This is a quality I found across the 2015 vintage in the Bolgheri appellation. Only 6,000 bottles were produced.

The 2016 Bolgheri Rosso Cipriana is a Tuscan blend of 75% Cabernet Sauvignon, 15% Merlot and 10% Syrah. There is freshness here, followed by a bright and buoyant quality of fruit in which you recognize dark cherry, wild berry and plum.
This is an informal wine to pair with a nice cinghiale (wild boar) sausage or other red meat pasta dishes. Some 10,000 bottles were made.

The 2018 Bolgheri Rosso Cipriana is about two-thirds Cabernet Sauvignon with some Merlot and Syrah. The bouquet is fragrant and bright with wild cherry, dark rose and tilled earth. This wine offers a simple approach, but there's plenty of easy and good-drinking honesty in this well-priced Tuscan red. Try it with a wood-oven pizza. Some 15,000 bottles were made.
