The 2010 Bolgheri Rosso Scopaio (80-20 Cabernet Sauvignon and Syrah) proves to be a soft and plush wine with bright accents of modern spice. There isn't too much complexity or layering, but the wine goes down easily. Anticipated maturity: 2014-2016. Laura Fabiani tells me her estate was acquired by her grandfather Otello who bought it directly from Count Gaddo della Gherardesca in 1975. La Cipriana is the fourth oldest estate in Bolgheri and their first vintage of San Martina dates back to 1978. Importer: Royalty Importers, www.royaltyimporters.com

Made with 80% Cabernet Sauvignon and 20% Syrah, the 2011 Bolgheri Rosso Scopaio is a disappointment. There is a disjointed quality to the bouquet with dried cherry skin, orange peel and candied apple that jet out in a haphazard manner. I tasted both bottles with similar results.

Cipriana's 2013 Bolgheri Rosso Scopaio is a simple red blend that offers medium intensity and a slightly disjointed mouthfeel. There are aromas of cherry and blackberry with spice, tar and leather at the back. The elements are presented in a rather simple and one-dimentional manner. The wine is composed of 80% Cabernet Sauvignon and 20% Syrah, and it aged in oak for ten months.

The 2014 Bolgheri Rosso Scopaio is a soft and luscious red wine with rich notes of cherry, chocolate and spice. The wine is well put together and seamless in integration with rich extract and soft appeal. This is yet another wine from the 2014 vintage that offers plenty of pleasurable surprises despite indications that the vintage would underperform. Scopaio is 80% Cabernet Sauvignon and 20% Syrah that make for fine blending partners.

The 2015 Bolgheri Rosso Scopaio is a blend of 80% Cabernet Sauvignon with 20% Syrah. This is a bold and opulent expression that underlines the warm growing season of the 2015 vintage. The wine presents an inky dark appearance and rich aromas. Ultimately, in the mouth it is not as densely extracted as you might initially anticipate. This quality makes it easier to pair with your favorite meat dishes. Only 4,000 bottles were produced.

This is a pretty Cabernet Sauvignon with bright intensity and lots of balanced acidity versus power and grit. The 2016 Bolgheri Rosso Vigna Scopaio offers both grace and muscle in balanced terms. Thanks to that inner harmony, you can pair this with a nice cut of Chianina beef and grilled vegetables. Some 6,000 bottles were made.

A pure expression of Cabernet Sauvignon, the Cipriana 2018 Bolgheri Rosso Vigna Scopaio 339 opens to deep, dark fruit tones with black cherry, crème de cassis and dark plum. The wine offers rich, dark fruit intensity that is presented with energy and balance. Notes of spice, leather and tobacco are subtle and appropriately relegated to a background role. The wine offers mid-weight texture with extra density that wraps thickly over the palate. It's an excellent choice for steak. Some 5,000 bottles were released.
