This is a pure expression of Cabernet Sauvignon that comes from a low-elevation, two-hectare plot with clay soils. The Cipriana 2020 Bolgheri Rosso Vigna Scopaio 339 opens to a whirlwind of dark fruit nuances with dried blackberry, plum, rum cake, dried oregano and cereal. For context, these vines are adjacent to Podere Sepaio at the bullseye center of the appellation. Fermentation is in steel tanks, and the wine ages for 10 months in first and second-use French oak barrels. This bottle is recognized for the linear directness of the palate minus the opulent softness and plushness that you see in many of its peers. That focused approach makes this a terrific red meat wine, especially the fatty or gristly cuts.
